Negative Evidence

Example 1 : James Cooper

When did the ancestor James Cooper arrive in Stokes County? The tax lists of North Carolina provide a yearly glimpse into the lives of its inhabitants in the 1790s. Possible relations to James are other Coopers who appear in the tax lists of Stokes County consistently from 1790-1797.<sup>1</sup>

- John Cooper listed with 600 acres, and 1-2 white polls depending on the year
- Michael Cooper, 60 acres, 1 white poll
- Thomas Cooper, 100 acres, 1 white poll
- William Cooper, 1 white poll

The absence of James Cooper in the tax lists of 1790-1797 shows that he did not reside in the county until at least 1800 where he is enumerated on the census.

Example 2: Samuel Cooper

The 1800 census for Salisbury, Rowan County, North Carolina, shows several of the sons of Samuel Cooper still residing in Rowan County – David, Thomas, and William.<sup>2</sup> James is not listed in the county, providing negative evidence that he had probably moved north into Stokes County and is listed there in 1800.

Example 3: William Trainor

To identify whether William Trainor came from an established Trainor family in Sussex County, New Jersey, thus eliminating him as a son of John Trainor of Brooklyn Ward 6, Kings County, New York, additional records were sought. The 1840 census shows no Trainor household in Sussex County, New Jersey.<sup>3</sup> Deeds,<sup>4</sup> mortgages,<sup>5</sup> naturalizations,<sup>6</sup> and probate records<sup>7</sup> were also searched with no results for a Trainor individual in Sussex County, New Jersey.

The lack of records for any Trainor individuals in Sussex County, New Jersey, is negative evidence that William Trainor was not from the area and likely made his way west upon the death of his parents.
